

An Ass Putting airs.

(Aesop's Fable)

Vanity

An Ass once carried through the streets of a city a famous wooden Image, to be placed in one of its Temple. As he passed along, the crowd were making prostrations before the Image.

The Ass, thinking that they bowed their heads in token of respect for him, bristled up with pride, put on airs, and waving his head started giving the people around asinine smiles before moving another step.

The driver, seeing that laid his whip lustily about his shoulders and said, "O you dull-head! It is not yet come to this, that men should pay worship to an Ass."
