In the woods near a lake, not long ago, there lived a happy family of Daffodils.

Chip was a very pretty Daffodil. With her cutely colorful petals, she was a glorious sight, yet, she hated being a Daffodil !

She wanted to be a butterfly. She dreamt of flying from rippling streams to the green meadows and hills and be happy!

One day, a beautiful butterfly visited the family of Daffodils. Slowly, she flew around and around admiring their charm and splendor

No Daffodil attracted her attention more than Chip No doubt! Chip was the most beautiful and loveliest Daffodil ever!

Finally, gently, she rested on Chip and began admiring her beauty! Chip felt friendly towards her visitor and began pouring out to her sadness, frustration and unsatisfied desires. She did not want to be a Daffodil, but a butterfly!

Our butterfly was surprised. How could such a wonderful Daffodil wish to be a Butterfly! She replied: "It's very funny, you know! All my life I had a secret desire to be a Daffodil myself! Daffodils are the most precious creatures of all creation!. How can you ever wish to be a butterfly?"

Our Daffodil understood and with a tear to two in her eyes, said: "\Oh! I see! I understand!" And there was laughter!
