

THE EULOGY

*Praise, thank, and give credit to your home people while you live with them
Do not delay to give positive strokes to others; do it as soon as you can Speak well of others whilst they are alive, not after they died.*

Ferdinand was a very good, honest and loving family man. By nature, however, he was overzealous and a trifle perfectionist.

At home, as expected, there were occasional heated arguments about trifles and irrelevant matters.

At his Funeral Mass, his daughter Rose gave a short eulogy of her dear dad. Among other things, she mentioned how loving, generous, zealous, honest, self-sacrificing and devoted her Dad had been and how much all at home loved him

All of a sudden, the dead Ferdinand turned around in his coffin, sat up and audibly enough for all the congregation to hear, retorted: "Darling Rose, Why did you not tell me all these things earlier? .Now, what's the use to me!!
