

THE TWO BASKETS

(Greek Mythological story)

We tend to be blind to our faults and mistakes and sharp-eyed to the mistakes of others.

There was a man who went through life carrying two big baskets hanging from his shoulders, one in front of him, the other behind him.

Whenever he saw any mistakes, sins or shortcomings in others, he kept them in the basket in front of him.

Whenever he did any mistake and sin, or he discovered any failures or shortcomings in him, he threw them all into the basket behind

It was without saying that he went through life ever criticizing others and extolling himself.
